Mozilla Firefox 4
(Mac OS X)
Firefox 4 on Mac OS X introduces a similar look and feel from previous versions, with some slight changes. Upon first opening the browser, you will notice that there are fewer icons on the toolbar. Additionally, tabs are now displayed above the address bar.

Where is the Reload (Refresh) button?

The Reload button can be found at the end of the address bar, next to the Star icon.

How do I turn on the Add-on bar?

The Add-on bar displays information from Firefox add-ons at the bottom of the Firefox window. To turn this on, click on View → Toolbars and click on Add-on Bar.

How do I turn off web site tracking?

Most websites store certain information about a user’s behavior and with that information, can provide it to other companies, i.e. advertisers. In version 4, Firefox introduces a Do Not Track option that tells websites you do not want your browsing behavior to be tracked. While this feature relies on websites voluntarily honoring this request, it may boost your privacy on the web. (By default, this option is enabled.)

If you would like to turn this feature off, in the Menu bar above, click on Firefox → Preferences.
In the Preferences window, click on Advanced → General tab and uncheck the box labeled “Tell web sites I do not want to be tracked” and click on the Red button in the top-left of the window.
