Biographical sketch

Dr. Donald J. Shetler, music educator, was born on July 22nd, 1926 in Bad Axe, Michigan. He received the BS degree in music education from East Tennessee State University, and the M.Mus. and EdD. degrees from the University of Michigan. Shetler also studied violoncello with Oliver Edel, and trumpet with Clifford Lillya. He was awarded research grants from the National Educational Television Research Center and the Rackham Graduate School (University of Michigan). His doctoral dissertation was one of the first to employ computer data analysis and to focus on the new field of educational television. Much of his dissertation research was carried out at the National Music Camp (Interlochen, Michigan), where he was a member of the radio and film staff for several summers.

Dr. Shetler was named Adjunct Professor of Music at Charleston Southern University (North Charleston, South Carolina), and became internationally known for his research in the areas of fetal music response and arts education curriculum development. Thereafter, he served on the faculty of the Eastman School of Music from 1965 until his retirement in 1988, serving part of that time as Chairman of the Music Education department. He was the first Eastman faculty member to be awarded a University of Rochester Bridging Fellowship, which supported inter-disciplinary study by faculty members in schools across the University. In addition to his full-time faculty appointments, Dr. Shetler held visiting professorships at no fewer than 22 colleagues over the course of his career.

He was the author of the books Film Guide for Music Educators and In Memoriam Howard Hanson: Future of Musical Education in America. His study of the influence of music on the pre-natal infant, involving the later development of language and memory skills in children exposed to music in utero, is often cited by other researchers. In 1965 he founded the Suzuki Talent Education Program and served as its first director until 1971. Alongside his academic work, Dr. Shetler maintained a busy schedule as a performing musician. Dr. Shetler served as principal cellist and assistant conductor of the Cleveland Philharmonic Orchestra. He also was a cellist in the civic orchestras of Ann Arbor, Michigan; of Jackson, Michigan; and of Toledo, Ohio. In 1989-90 he conducted the College of Charleston Community Orchestra in 1989 to 1990. He also played trumpet in several jazz groups.

Dr. Shetler died on May 31, 2014 in Mount Pleasant, South Carolina.
Provenance

The collection was the gift of Dr. Shetler, rendered in seven installments between August, 2000 and October, 2000.

Scope and content

The collection is comprised of research papers and other writings by Dr. Donald J. Shetler, extant in the form of published copies, off-prints, and unpublished drafts. Certain other documents, including newspaper clippings, reflect Dr. Shetler’s professional interests and Eastman School of Music activities.

Restrictions on use

There are no restrictions on use of the collection other than those imposed by the provisions of the United States Copyright Law and its revisions. Due permission must be obtained from all copyright holders before reproductions will be granted.

Associations

The Donald J. Shetler Collection is one of numerous collections of professional papers deposited by ESM faculty members at the Ruth T. Watanabe Special Collections. In the field of music education, relevant collections include the papers of Marie Erhart Pearson, Marvin J. Rabin, Mitchell Robinson, and Frederick W. Westphal. In addition, other faculty members’ collections touch on instrumental pedagogy in fundamental ways that parallel and mirror music education; such collections include the papers of John Celentano and George MacNabb. RTWSC also holds, on deposit, the archives of both the New York State School Music Association and the American Orff-Schulwerk Association.
DESCRIPTION OF SERIES

Series 1: Original writings

The collection is comprised of one series, containing research papers and other writings by Dr. Donald J. Shetler, extant in the form of published copies, off-prints, and unpublished drafts. Certain other documents, including newspaper clippings, reflect Dr. Shetler’s professional interests and Eastman School of Music activities.

The sub-division of the series into seven sub-series reflects an arrangement posited by Dr. Shetler himself along thematic grounds, outlined in a letter of 23 August 23 2000. For the researcher’s enlightenment, the collection holds photocopies of relevant correspondence received from Dr. Shetler (in box 5/10). The seven letters provide citations of the writings herein cited, together with Dr. Shetler’s own commentary on same.
