Office for Student Activities Mission Statement:

The Office for Student Activities provides meaningful co-curricular opportunities, programs, activities, and support services for students that enhance student learning, encourage and foster student involvement and spirit, provide leadership opportunities, create a strong sense of community, and engage students, while supporting and complementing the educational goals of the institution. By collaborating with community partners, departments, students, faculty, and staff our students are engaged in creative programming, campus traditions, and co-curricular learning opportunities that create a vibrant campus community.
Although he established a school of music that rose to international prominence, George Eastman (1854 -1932) claimed no musical expertise. Yet he declared “. . . I love to listen to music and in listening I’ve come to think of it as a necessary part of life.”

There was little time for such pleasant pursuits when Eastman was growing up. He left school at age 14 to help support his widowed mother and two older sisters. He first worked as a messenger for an insurance company, studying accounting in his spare time. At age 20, he became a junior clerk. In 1877, the 23-year-old began experimenting with photography and three years later founded the Eastman Dry Plate Company. A series of landmark innovations revolutionized photography, putting picture taking into the hands of anyone who could push a button.

The Eastman Kodak Company’s success brought great wealth to its founder, who became as well known for his philanthropy as for his business accomplishments. Mr. Eastman helped fund hospitals and dental clinics, universities and technical institutes. In 1918 he purchased the corporate and property rights to a local music school. After presenting the school to the University of Rochester in 1919, Mr. Eastman laid plans for a new music school building and an adjoining theater. The new Eastman School of Music opened in 1921, and the Eastman Theatre in 1922. After extensive renovation, Eastman Theatre reopened as Kodak Hall at Eastman Theatre in October 2009.

Kodak Hall at Eastman Theatre is Rochester’s preeminent performance hall and the primary venue for the School’s larger orchestras and ensembles. It also is the principal hall for the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra and other community-sponsored events. Designed by Lawrence White, architect of Penn Station in New York City, the Theatre opened September 4, 1922. Its opulence and decor reflect the taste and elegance of the 1920s, with murals and paintings by Barry Faulkner and Ezra Winters. The walls in the lobby have eight block prints depicting the myth of Cupid and Psyche, created by the French artist LaFitte for Napoleon’s use in decorating a ballroom in the palace at Versailles. Over the staircase near the Ladies’ Lounge on the balcony level is a 17th-century Giordani mural. The chandelier is made of 20,000 individual pieces of crystal from Italy and Czechoslovakia.

George Eastman wanted to make Rochester a world-renowned center of art and music, and hoped to cultivate public participation in music. He instituted collegiate and community divisions at the School so that people of all ages and musical abilities could experience first-rate musical instruction. The Eastman Theatre also figured in his plans to infuse the community with music. Six days a week, silent movies with live accompaniment were presented; the remaining day was reserved for concerts. The Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra was created by augmenting the Eastman Theatre Orchestra with additional players.

Eastman was 68 years old when the Eastman School was formally dedicated in 1922. Until his death 10 years later, he remained a guiding force in the School and theater that bear his name.

We bolster the educational mission of the institution and the development of students as lifelong learners by delivering an array of cultural, educational, social, and recreational programs, services, and facilities.

By any form or name, we serve as the heart of the campus community and create a welcoming environment by:

- Operating as a student-centered organization that engages in shared decision making and holistic development through employment and involvement.
- Advocating for inclusivity and equity, fostering respect, and affirming the identities of all individuals.
- Educating students in leadership and social responsibility and offering firsthand experiences in global citizenship.
- Providing gathering spaces to encourage formal and informal community interactions that build meaningful relationships.

Traditionally considered the living room, the college union enhances the student experience and cultivates an enduring connection to the institution.
OFFICE OF STUDENT AFFAIRS COMMITMENT TO CORE COMPETENCIES

The Office of Student Affairs at the Eastman School of Music has a strategy to inspire and support student leaders by contributing to the common good, seeing service and citizenship as central values to the health and well-being of our community, and by adhering to core competencies of student development. As such, Student Affairs will use the following competencies described below as core skills and milestones to measure student development:

First Year

1) Familiarize yourself with the Eastman Campus, understand its background, a general understanding of campus resources, office locations, hours of operations, and a history of its foundation. This includes an exposure to the mission statement of the school, the school songs, the Meliora Values, and many of its traditions.

2) Students should have a basic understanding of and familiarity with many offices and administrators, including, but not limited to: Public Safety Officers, Facilities, Housekeeping, Fire Safety, and Pest Control. Separately, students should be familiar with not only their personal instructor, but their academic advisors, support staff, department secretaries, and administration that assists with course selection. Students should be able to call, return emails, and visit during office hours – students understand that offices close on weekends and holidays. Students should understand that communication is necessary to solve a problem and that they must take an active role in advocating for their own support.

3) As “citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will apply their knowledge when seeking solutions to issues and problems. They will bring an understanding of what contributed to their concerns with them and take on responsibility for their actions when communicating with others and finding ways to navigate mutually desired outcomes.

4) Students are expected to communicate, collaborate, and learn with multiple diverse communities and know that successful change efforts must understand the roles of privilege in our community, diversity in society, diversity in thought, lessons, and individuals. Multiple perceptions are welcomed, but not always judged equally because some perceptions have evidence to back up claims.

5) Students should recognize a hierarchy or chain of command within the structure of each department. Begin by working through these department structures and with each other to find solutions before stepping over a boundary.

6) Suggestions: Students should join a club or organization, develop an interest and have a hobby, and pursue their passion. Have deep conversations about faith, exercise, read books, and meet new friends at programming events. We encourage students to apply to be a part of orientation, apply for a front desk position, welcome desk, usher, a fellow, or first-year experience team member.
1) Familiarize yourself with the Meliora Values, understand the concept of altruism (selflessness) and collaboration at a deeper level – giving back to your school, your community, and your circle. This includes participating in your Students’ Association, Club or Organization as an Executive Board member, or starting a club or organization if you have a shared interest with a group of friends that is not represented. Collaboration means working with others to achieve something that you could not have done alone.

2) Students should have a deeper understanding of and familiarity with several offices and administrators, including, but not limited to: Registrar’s office, University Health Services, University Counseling Services, Center for Student Conduct Management, CARE Network, and Office of Student Affairs. Separately, students should be familiar with the deans of their school, understanding what they are and are not responsible for supervising. Understanding the difference between faculty and staff is a major part of this familiarity.

3) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will apply their knowledge acquisition, integration, into construction and application of meaning. By connecting knowledge to other knowledge, ideas, and experiences; constructing knowledge; and relating knowledge to daily life, students should develop a complexity of critical thinking – the ability to be reflective in thought, have reasoning, and creativity in their problem-solving. Students should bring examples and solutions to problems with them, not just an expectation for others to solve problems for them.

4) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will develop intrapersonal skills – realistic self-appraisal, self-understanding, and self-respectful skills exercised by a review of their goals and aspirations. Identity development and a commitment to ethics and integrity are a part of their development, as well as, civic engagement.

5) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will participate in humanitarianism and civic engagement – understanding and having appreciation of cultural and human differences, social responsibility, be exposed to a global perspective, and sense of civic responsibility through seeking diversity experiences at our school.

6) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will have a practical competence – pursuing smart goals, communicating effectively, having technical competence, managing personal affairs, beginning to develop career aspirations, demonstrating professionalism, maintaining health and wellness, and living a purposeful and satisfying life.

Suggestions: Students should maintain membership in a club or organization, maintain an interest and have a hobby, and pursue their passion. Have deep conversations about faith, exercise, read books, and meet new friends at programming events. We encourage students to apply to be a part of orientation – possibly as an orientation leader, apply for a front desk position, building manager, or Resident Assistant, welcome desk, usher, a fellow, first-year experience team member, or if very mature, a tour guide for admissions.
1) Familiarize yourself with being a mentor and inspiration to others at our School. This includes participating in your Students’ Association and Club or Organization as an Executive Board member. Being a mentor means that other students seek you out. Your dedication and leadership is not self-promoted, but recognized by peers, faculty, and staff. Being an inspiration to other students leads to balance and an aligning in their success, not jealousy or unachievable goals.

2) Students should have a deeper understanding of and familiarity with several offices and administrators, including, but not limited to: Alumni and Advancement, Financial Aid, Eastman Community Music School, and Concert Office. Separately, students should be familiar with clarifying misinformation with underclassmen – the ability to squash rumors and clarify untrue statements about our school is paramount to understanding how colleges really work.

3) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will identify and navigate challenges with campus partners. Students will avoid social media to share their grievances and instead discuss their problems with department administrators when they are encountered.

4) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will ensure that they are aware of all sides of a story, that they are informed fully of the details before making a public statement and that they are engaged in discussions to be more informed in order to understand before insisting on a change needing to be made. Every rule has a reason.

5) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will model a vision of civility and engage with peers, faculty, and staff with mutual respect.

6) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will facilitate processes and practices to ensure physical and emotional safety and security of all members of the Eastman Community.

7) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will exhibit the appropriate behaviors of flexibility and adaptability when faced with drastic change.

Suggestions: Students should allow younger members of organizations the ability to step into leadership roles like treasurers, vice-president, and president roles. Resident Advisors, Fellows, and First-Year Experience Team members who are juniors should consider allowing younger students the ability to step into these leadership roles while they themselves should branch out into the greater Rochester community. Seek out experiences that will lead to greater development, like, but not limited to: an off campus apartment with roommate(s), a study abroad experience, or alternative spring break plans. This is also a good time to explore job opportunities that are outside of your original scope – widen your horizons.
Fourth Year

1) Familiarize yourself with a deeper understanding of your own long term goals. You should be aware of all the requirements you have left for this academic year and have a plan to achieve them. This plan includes an understanding of yourself and how you succeed. You are aware of when you need breaks and how you best work within this institution. Additionally, you are aware of how you should maintain your health. You are no longer able to place blame on any other entity for decisions you make. You are aware that every choice has consequence. As a leader at this school, you have prepared yourself for a timely progression or whatever class schedule you now face. This is of your own doing.

2) Students should have a deeper understanding of and familiarity with all responsibilities, requirements, and relevant conditions. You set expectations and other students will look to you for your leadership.

3) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will participate in events and programs they say they will. And say no when needed.

4) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will specifically articulate what they would like to see happen and understand the difference between their wants and reality.

5) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will ensure that when they are representing their peers that they are not just speaking for themselves but speaking for multiple constituents. The needs of the many often outweigh the needs of the selfish. Students will understand this and be prepared to answer these questions of their younger peers.

6) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will return emails, phone calls, and written correspondence in a timely manner. If they book an appointment, they confirm, and show up when requested.

7) As “Citizens of this Campus” who work within a contractual understanding of creative collaboration, students will leave a space better than they found it when utilizing a reservable area (ex. classroom, conference room, etc.). They will clean up after themselves and others. They will eat last when food is served because their guests should have a chance to eat before anyone else.

Suggestions: Students should seek out positions like Students’ Association president, Senior Class Events Planning Committee, and similar opportunities to engage with their peers before graduation. Students should spend the year getting close to friends that they may not see again in years. Students should savor meals, experiences of actively enjoying another friend’s company, and boosting each other up. Eastman is a special place where you have learned to encourage each other, seen each other grow, and arrived at your senior year arm-in-arm with a network of fellow Eastman alumni. Treasure these moments and give back to your School.
Nine Guiding Principles

A Clear and Focused Mission Statement
All student organizations must have a clear and focused mission statement in their constitutions. Mission Statements should enhance the educational goals of the UofR and the Eastman School of Music, including: freedom, autonomy, community and responsibility as well as improving the campus community and undergraduate experience. Without a clear and focused mission, a student organization has no direction and no purpose on campus. Each organization must fill a unique and specific niche, and their specific intent must be clearly defined in the mission statement. All organizations are expected to operate within their stated missions.

Community-Focused Spending
Each Students’ Association funded group must serve the diverse members of the Eastman Students’ Association. Groups that simply consume Students’ Association funding solely on their members are of no value to the general student body or the betterment of the campus community. This community-focused spending can take many forms, including educational opportunities, skills training, community building activities, and entertainment programming. Students’ Association funded groups must also educate the general student body about the group’s mission, activities, and goals to ensure a diverse learning experience for all students on campus.

Membership
All student organizations are required to maintain and demonstrate a general and active membership sufficient to accomplish their missions and meet the Principles of Eastman Students’ Association Student Organizations. To ensure accurate reporting, members of an organization must confirm their involvement in the organization. Without sufficient membership, too much strain is put on active members with less than desirable results. Also, inadequate membership is a sign that an organization is not unique enough, fulfilling a campus need, or sustainable, meaning there is simply not enough interest on campus. In order to remain an active student organization, groups must demonstrate that they have at least 5 active general members including the organization’s elected leadership board.

Inclusion
All student organizations must be actively inclusive and welcoming of the diversity of the undergraduate students of the Eastman School of Music at the UofR, in accordance with Article I, Section 1.3. Organizations in violation of Article I, Section 1.3 will not be funded & risk de-recognition as a student organization. All organizations must also make the effort to be accessible to the student body through programming, activities, & collaboration. An organization whose membership is not open to the entire undergraduate body & is exclusive in nature, is not eligible for an annual budget, but is eligible for supplemental funding for programs that are open to the entire undergraduate student body.

Uniqueness
All student organizations must be unique and distinct from all other student organizations. This is necessary to prevent too many similar organizations. Similar organizations pull similar members, so the membership of each organization suffers. If the number of student organizations is not managed, resources such as space, money, advisors, and advisor time begin to run out and every organization on campus suffers. Student organizations that overlap, duplicate, or compete with the academic mission of Eastman School of Music will not be granted Students’ Association recognition.

Programming, Activities, and Collaboration (PAC)

All student organizations are required to demonstrate through initiatives, programs, events, collaborations, and meetings that they are active within the Eastman campus community and enhancing undergraduate student life. Without PAC, an organization is inactive, ineffective, and not inclusive. Collaboration and co-sponsorship among organizations has been found to be successful at community building. Collaboration also sparks dialogue, connections, and saves resources. In order to improve the quality of life on campus, it is important for all student organizations to be collaborative within the campus community. Students’ Association funded groups are strongly encouraged to collaborate with other groups on their initiatives, programs, events, or major expenses. The goals of this requirement are:

- To promote, establish, and maintain new and existing relationships between organizations;
- To maximize the benefit to students realized by the pooling of funds and other resources;
- To encourage the creative exchange of ideas between many groups;
- To increase awareness by student organizations of each other’s programming calendar, thereby indirectly creating a well-planned and balanced calendar of events throughout the academic year.

Future Leadership Development

All student organizations must invest in the future leadership of the organization in order to maintain recognized status. This should include recruitment, leadership opportunities, training, transitioning, and developing members. Such activities are essential to enhance an organization's chance of succeeding and persisting. When an organization gains Students’ Association recognition, they are expected to remain a successful organization on campus for years to come. However, if there is no future leadership development, success is not possible, and Students’ Association de-recognition may occur.

Evaluation/Assessment

All student organizations are required to evaluate their programs, activities, and collaborations. Organizations that evaluate and assess their mission, constitution, programs, publications, activities, and collaborations are able to evolve and remain sustainable. All organizations must evaluate themselves and what they have done in the past in order to continually improve. They also must assess themselves to make sure they have not strayed too far from their original mission. After each program groups must complete a Program Evaluation Form (P.E.F.). These can be found at http://www.esm.rochester.edu/studentlife/files/Program-Evaluation-Form-PEF.pdf or in the Office of Student Affairs. A P.E.F. must be turned in within 3 business days of the program, activity, or meeting.

Fiscal Responsibility

After a group is awarded Students’ Association funds, it may spend that funding however it sees fit, so long as those expenditures do not violate Students’ Association Spending Guidelines and University Finance Policies. These groups are not to be judged for straying from their budgets as such a rule can stifle creativity. Rather, they will be judged on their ability to adhere to these Students’ Association Principles; accomplish the items listed in their mission statements; and use their resources in a fiscally responsible, reasonable, and forward-looking manner. The terms responsible and reasonable do not necessitate frugality; however, total spending should not exceed the group’s allocated annual budget, and expenses should not be extravagant. Groups should always consider both short and long term expenses and needs when making a purchasing decision.

- Establish and maintain weekly meetings throughout each semester
