THE CERTIFICATE OF ADVANCED ACHIEVEMENT IN EARLY MUSIC

The Certificate of Advanced Achievement in Early Music offers Eastman School of Music (ESM) students advanced instruction in historical performance practices with practical training on a period instrument or voice.

The importance of historically informed performance in the music profession is widely recognized in the field and supported by an expanding body of scholarship, a growing number of early music ensembles and course offerings in schools of music, and increasing interest from music students and professionals. The Certificate of Advanced Achievement in Early Music will provide students with a working knowledge of performance practice, as well as practical training on historical instruments in both solo and ensemble settings. It is a program degree students may choose to add to the degree in which they are already enrolled to enrich their curriculum and professional qualifications. In addition to informing students' study and performance of solo early-music repertoire, the Certificate of Advanced Achievement in Early Music will prepare instrumentalists and vocalists to collaborate with early music ensembles and to become informed instructors of this repertoire. It will prepare students for participation in numerous early-music festivals, such as the Boston Early Music Festival, Utrecht Early Music Festival, Twin Cities Early Music Festival, IBERICA Early Music Festival, and local opportunities such as the Rochester Early Music Festival and Musica Spei. It will also prepare eligible students for competitions such as the National Centre for Early Music competitions, the International Early Music Competition in the Loire Valley, the International Biber Competition, the Indianapolis International Baroque Competition, and the International Bach Competition in Leipzig. Furthermore, the present-day recording industry increasingly places greater emphasis on early music and contemporary music, seeking to broaden the repertoire beyond the canon of the common-practice period and offering recording contracts to stellar performers who specialize in early or contemporary periods. Early Music will benefit other students by deepening their musical informance and ultimately preparing them for professional life as more effective performers and teachers.

Requirements: Please see the website for all of required courses <https://www.esm.rochester.edu/certificates/early-music/>

How Can I Apply?

The Certificate of Advanced Achievement in Early Music is open to all ESM graduate students (MM, MA, DMA, and PhD). Admission to the program requires permission and a signature from the candidate's current studio teacher. An interview/audition with the teacher of the secondary instrument (harpsichord, lute, Baroque oboe, etc.) is also required. Graduate students may apply for admission into the Certificate of Advanced Achievement program at the time of their matriculation into the MM, DMA or PhD or at any point thereafter, keeping in mind that the program typically requires at least three semesters to complete.
